WANCHAI FERRY

The wanchai district is one of Hong Kong's busiest commercial areas. People from all parts of Hong Kong society pass through the district - business people, laborers, shoppers - on their way to work, play or to the pier from which they can take the Wanchai Ferry to Kowloon, across Victoria Harbour. It's in this bustling part of the city that our story begins.

THE DUMPLING QUEEN

In 1977, Chong Kin Wo left her native Shandong Province in east central China for a new life in the bustling city of Hong Kong. Work was scarce in Hong Kong for a single mother with two young daughters, so Madame Chong went to work for herself. She began making dumplings from an old family recipe. Every night she'd prepare her dumplings. And every morning, she'd push her handcart to the ferry pier to sell them.

The ranks of her fans grew. But Madame Chong strived to do better. She listened carefully to her customers, revising her recipes over time and perfecting them in every detail. Word soon spread across the city and her dumplings became the talk of the town. The Hong Kong press even named Madame Chong the city's "Dumpling Queen."

AN INTERNATIONAL BRAND

In 1985, Madame Chong established the Wanchai Ferry™ Peking Dumpling Company to make her creations available across the city and beyond. In time, Wanchai Ferry™ became available not just in China, but across Asia and in Europe.
